

Money Rules the World

Money rules the world

And ain't that the truth

They say money can't buy you happiness

But it can buy you a new car

A mansion

Anything material that you think can make you happy

But somewhere there's a little girl

Asking her momma for a new doll

Somewhere there's a little boy

Asking his poppa for a new train

And all they can say is no

Not right now

We don't have the money

And that little boy

That little girl

They don't understand

Cause on TV

All you see

Is little boys and girls

Getting whatever they want

Their parents spoiling them

Cause they have the money

They have MORE money

And that makes them better

On TV

All you see is

Money being rained down

Sales and merchandise

Things that you really really want

But as they get older

That little boy and little girl

Will realize just how wrong they are

There's a difference between want and need

They shouldn't have thrown that tantrum

They shouldn't have cried

And yelled

Or screamed

Their parents wanted to give them that doll

That train

But they couldn't

It wasn't what they needed

Money rules the world

And ain't that the truth

They say money can't buy you happiness

But it can buy you a new car

A mansion

Anything material that you think can make you happy

Money rules the world

But the world doesn't rule money
