

Our Daughters, Our Little Girls

They are our daughters

Our little girls

Such a light

Such a blessing

In this dank, dark world

They deserve so much more

Than the constants of Society's views

Telling them that they are less than what they seem

Our daughters

Our little girls

Are being told what to wear

What to look like

How to talk

How much they are worth

They are told not to do this

Not to do that

Freedoms taken away

Left and right

Because our daughters

Our little girls

Live in a world where it is men

Men who are supposed to rule everything

Even them

Boys are given more privileges

And our daughters

Our little girls

Are left in the dust

They are told that they must wear this for a boy to like them

Put on makeup

Change your appearance

Be docile

Don't fight

Be smart

But not too smart

You don't want to be smarter than your husband, boyfriend, the male

They are told that they are worthless

Unless you have a male in your life

They are told they are worthless if a man who is not your husband

Not your boyfriend

Violates them

They are told that maybe they should've watched where they were going

They shouldn't have been drinking

They shouldn't have been dressed like that

They shouldn't

They shouldn't

It's their fault

All their fault

That a male thought he had the the right to put their hands on

Our daughters

Our little girls

But they didn't

They had no right

And our daughters

Our little girls

Are the ones punished, discriminated, ridiculed

For it

Our daughters

Our little girls

Who never asked for a male's attention

Who just wanted more than the world decided it could offer

Who deserve more than the world thinks it should offer

Our daughters

Our little girls

Who never asked for Society's opinion on what they could or couldn't do

Who can do and be whatever and whoever they want

Who are their mothers' daughters

Their sisters' little girls

And are going to take on the world like we did
